

UzSWLU Support for Students from Low Income Families 2025

SDG 1 No Poverty | Reporting year 2025

Throughout 2025, Uzbekistan State World Languages University provided free and targeted financial and social support to students from low-income families. The purpose of these services was to prevent financial hardship from interrupting students' education and to help them continue and complete their degree programs.

Support provided in 2025

Support area	University provision	Cost to eligible student
Psychological support	Individual counseling and student wellbeing support	Free
Health support	University health consultations and referral assistance	Free
Academic support	Mentoring, tutoring and adaptation support	Free
Financial support	Scholarships, tuition assistance and case-based material support	Grant or case-based support
Tuition flexibility	Payment deferrals and instalment arrangements during financial hardship	No separate service charge
Housing support	Priority consideration and case-based assistance with student accommodation	Subsidised where eligible

Eligibility and access

Priority is given to students whose low-income or serious financial disadvantage status is demonstrated through recognized national social-protection records or equivalent official documentation. Relevant categories may include the Iron Register, Youth Register, Women's Register and Unified Register of Social Protection where the applicable entry confirms financial need.

Eligible students may be identified through the relevant official records or may request support from the responsible university student-support unit. Assistance is determined according to the student's documented circumstances and the type of support requested.

Free and subsidised support

Psychological counseling, university health consultations, mentoring and academic support are provided without a separate service charge. Scholarships, tuition assistance, flexible payment arrangements and housing assistance are targeted or subsidised according to eligibility and individual need. Free services remain available alongside financial measures so that support is not limited to discounted provision alone.

Contribution to student continuation

The combination of free counseling, health and academic services with targeted financial and housing assistance provides a coordinated support pathway for students facing financial disadvantage. These measures are intended to reduce the risk of interruption or withdrawal and enable eligible students to participate fully in university life and complete their studies.
