

UZBEKISTAN STATE WORLD LANGUAGES UNIVERSITY

Public Events for Lifelong Learning

Public lectures | Literary discussions | Scientific seminars | Open community events

Uzbekistan State World Languages University regularly hosts publicly announced educational, scientific and cultural events. These include public lectures, scientific seminars, literary discussions, book presentations, educational fairs, conferences and community learning activities. Selected events are open to people who are not enrolled at the University and are announced through the University website, conference platform and public Telegram channels.

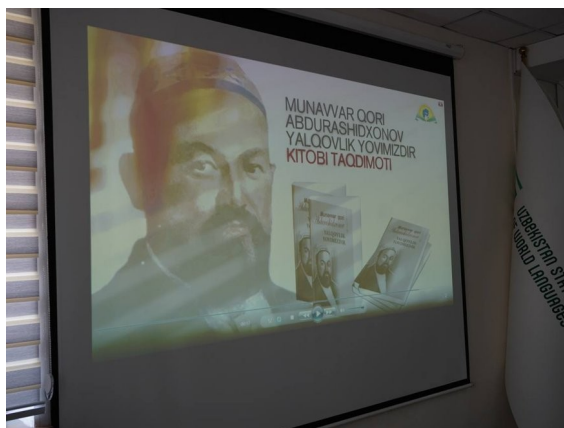

Institutional approach

Public access is established through open communication rather than by treating every internal University event as a public event. Announcements for eligible events provide a date, time and venue and invite interested readers, educators, researchers or community members to participate. Hybrid scientific events also publish online access information when external participation is available.

The principal audience remains academic. Most participants are students, academic staff, doctoral candidates and researchers. The University therefore does not claim that every event attracts a broad cross-section of the population. The evidence is that selected events are openly advertised and participation is not restricted to enrolled students or employees unless an announcement states otherwise.

Selected public events in 2025

- 1 February 2025 — "The Old Man and the Sea" public discussion at the main UzSWLU building. The announcement invited all interested readers to join the literary discussion.

- 6 December 2025 — A further session of the "Let Us Read Together" program, announced as an open book discussion with educational games and question-and-answer activities.

Public scientific and research events

The University also provides public access to academic knowledge. UzSWLU organizes scientific conferences, research seminars, methodological forums and dissertation discussions in physical, online and hybrid formats. The University's scientific events page describes these activities as open and interactive.

During 2025, multiple scientific seminars were publicly announced with their dates, University venues and Zoom access details. This enabled researchers and interested specialists from outside UzSWLU to follow eligible sessions remotely. The University conference platform also provides public information on national and international conferences and access to published conference materials.

Public communication and access

Information about eligible public events is disseminated through:

- The official UzSWLU website and scientific events pages.
- The University conference platform.
- The official Information Resource Center Telegram channel.
- Public faculty and University Book Club social media channels.
- Zoom announcements for eligible hybrid academic seminars.

The Information Resource Center channel is publicly accessible and identifies itself as the Center's official channel. Its 2025 archive contains advance announcements, dates, venues and open invitations for literary discussions, book fairs and educational meetings. The public channel therefore serves both as an outreach mechanism and as dated evidence that selected events were advertised beyond closed University systems.

Contribution to lifelong learning

The program extends learning beyond formal degree courses. It gives school communities, teachers, researchers, independent scholars, readers and other interested participants opportunities to engage with languages, literature, education, research, digital resources and social issues. These activities support the University's Education Policy, which promotes informational openness, education for all and lifelong learning through face-to-face, online, distance and additional educational opportunities.
