

UZBEKISTAN STATE WORLD LANGUAGES UNIVERSITY

Vocational Training and Executive Education Programs

Certified retraining | International participants | Free short courses | Open registration

Uzbekistan State World Languages University provides structured retraining, advanced training and short-term certificate programs for practising teachers, university educators and other professionals who are not enrolled in the University's regular degree programs. These activities are delivered principally through the Network Center for Retraining and Professional Development of Pedagogues. They are professionally oriented, separate from undergraduate and postgraduate degree study, and normally combine theoretical instruction, practical training and formal assessment. Successful participants may receive a qualification certificate or a certificate of completion.

Institutional provision

The Network Center operates under Uzbekistan State World Languages University and provides continuing professional education for staff from higher education institutions in Tashkent, the regions of Uzbekistan and international partner universities. In 2025, the Center was scheduled to train 897 participants in Philology and Language Teaching and in Theory and Practice of Translation. This figure is an annual training target and is not presented as a completed-participant total.

The principal training areas include:

- Philology and Language Teaching in English, French, German, Russian, Italian and Spanish.
- Theory and Practice of Translation.
- Contemporary foreign-language teaching methods and reflective practice.
- Curriculum planning and methodological support.
- Assessment and certification procedures.
- Digital educational technologies and the use of artificial intelligence in teaching.

Alongside these certified programs, the Network Center also offers short, non-degree training activities that are free of charge to any interested participant on registration, including courses on artificial intelligence and academic (scientific) writing.

Professional retraining and advanced training

From 6 to 30 January 2025, 26 professionals undertook advanced training in Philology and Language Teaching in English. Following the exit assessment, 18 trainees from other higher education institutions defended their qualification projects: six represented regional universities and twelve represented institutions based in Tashkent. Under the program's assessment rules, trainees who pass the exit test and successfully defend their projects receive a formal qualification certificate.

This program is among the clearest evidence that the University provides structured professional education to learners outside its regular student body. It has a defined provider, external participants, a specialized curriculum, assessment requirements and a certified outcome.

Intensive training for English language teachers

From 9 to 11 January 2025, UzSWLU hosted the intensive program "Principles of Continuous Training of English Language Teachers" within the Accelerating English Language Learning in Central Asia initiative. The program served 160 practising English-language teachers and was organized with the British Council, the Ministry of Higher Education, Science and Innovation, the Ministry of Preschool and School Education, and Tashkent State Pedagogical University.

National and international specialists delivered practice-oriented sessions on continuing professional development, contemporary teaching strategies and the effective organization of English-language education. The participants were teachers undertaking professional training rather than students pursuing a UzSWLU degree.

PRESSETT professional development program

On 24 and 25 February 2025, the University hosted the PRESSETT professional-development program for more than 160 faculty members from universities across Uzbekistan. The training addressed continuous professional development, reflective teaching, methodological lesson analysis, reflection in language-learning classes, professional development in schools and action planning.

The program concluded with action-planning and certificate-awarding sessions. The nationwide institutional affiliation of the participants demonstrates that the program served an external professional audience and was not part of the University's regular degree curriculum.

International professional training for Osh State University faculty

From 2 to 10 October 2025, UzSWLU delivered a professional-development course for faculty members of Osh State University in the Kyrgyz Republic. The course covered Philology and Language Teaching in English, German, Italian, French, Spanish and Russian. Participants who successfully completed the program received formal professional-development certificates.

The course provides direct evidence of cross-border continuing education delivered by UzSWLU to professionals who were not enrolled as University students.

Short-term certified training

UzSWLU and its Network Center also organized a 12-hour, four-day course entitled "Planning and Methodological Support of the Educational Process in Higher Education: Modern Approaches." The course combined theoretical and practical instruction on educational planning, methodological documentation, assessment and certification, and concluded with official certificates for all participants.

Because the published page does not clearly identify every participant's institutional affiliation, this course is used as supporting evidence rather than the principal proof of external participation.

Institutional impact

During 2025, UzSWLU maintained an identifiable portfolio of continuing professional education beyond its formal degree programs. The documented activities reached practising teachers and university educators from Tashkent, regional institutions across Uzbekistan and a foreign partner university. The strongest programs share the characteristics expected of executive or vocational education: a defined external professional audience, a focused curriculum, a limited training period, practical learning, assessment and a formal certificate. Taken together, the evidence demonstrates that professional and vocational learning for non-enrolled participants, including through free short courses open by registration, is an established institutional function of Uzbekistan State World Languages University.
